

After graduation from Indiana University with a degree in English, Mr. Kenneth Knox began his teaching career in Indiana. He has been teaching sixth through twelfth grade students for thirty-six years, thirty-one of them at St. Angela Merici.

His classroom expertise includes creative writing, expository writing, research papers, literature, poetry, drama, speech, and using correct grammar skills.

He has taught a variety of theology classes as well, focusing on Christology, the New Testament, Confirmation, Creed, Morality, and Church History.

Besides sharing his English skills, he has been called upon as an eighth grade coordinator, junior high coordinator, language arts coordinator, spelling bee coordinator, computer coordinator, Confirmation coordinator, student newspaper advisor, Power of the Pen coach, Spring Fling acting coach, high school shadow coordinator, high school application coordinator, and assistant to the principal.

In 1984 he received the Fairview Park Advancement of Education Award from the Kiwanis Club of Fairview Park and in 2006 was honored with the Diocesan Excellence in Education award.

Mr. Knox has been happily married for twenty-six years to Barbara, also an elementary teacher with over thirty-six years of teaching experience. They have two children, a son who graduated from Fordham and is currently working for ABC television in New York City as a taping editor and producer, and a daughter who is an honor student at John Carroll University.
